Displacement

Situated in Kabul's District 16, residents rent private houses throughout the six-street neighbourhood of Aloo Khil Village. This location provides residents with access to health and education facilities on Arzan Qemat Main Road. Each household pays an average monthly rent of 3,500 Afghanis. The settlement is largely composed of Pashtun communities, with just 10% Tajiks. The majority of residents are IDPs, originally from Nangarhar, Laghman and Paktya provinces, though some returnees from Hazara, Pakistan have joined the site more recently.

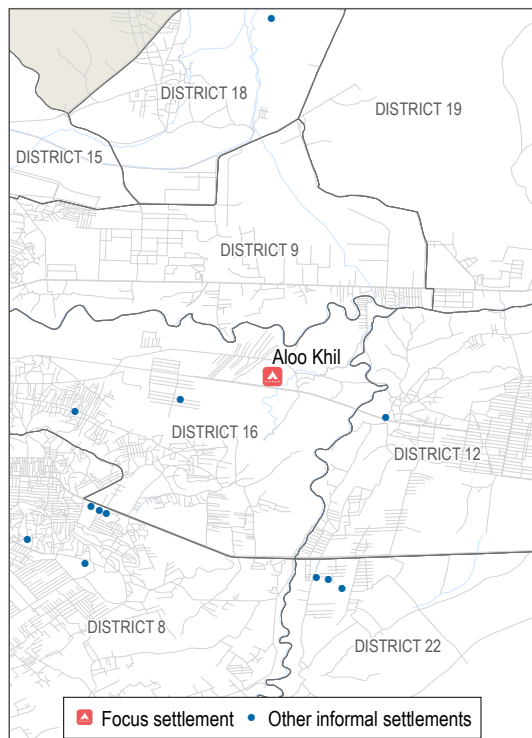

The first residents travelled to Aloo Khil in 2013, with 30 IDP households moving from Alingar, Laghman. There have since been several influxes of IDPs with 30 households from Kama in Nangarhar province arriving in 2014 and a further 20 households from Zurmat, Paktya, in 2015. In 2016, the first wave of returnees from the Hazara district of Pakistan arrived, with a small number of returnee households continuing to join the neighbourhood each month throughout the year.

Residents reported their plan to stay within the settlement as the affordable location provides security and employment benefits.
