Displacement

Located in Silo Main Street, Sarak Awal Silo informal settlement is one of the smallest in Kabul. Since the landowner is not known, residents do not currently pay rental fees. The entire population is from Pashtun communities. The settlement is comprised of both returnees from Peshawar, Pakistan and IDPs from the Afghan provinces of Laghman and Logar.

The settlement was first formed in 2003 by three returnee households moving from Peshawar, Pakistan. A second influx of residents joined the site later that same year with IDPs from across Afghanistan, including Alingar in Laghman province and Charkh in Logar province.

The settlement space is very small and is currently at capacity. Consequently, there is no scope for the settlement to expand. It has been reported that all residents plan to stay in the settlement as they have access to health and education facilities.
