Displacement

100 Families Camp 2 is an informal settlement located at the end of Sarak-e Naw Main Street. Households reportedly settled in this site because of a lack of alternative land options. Residents rent their homes from private landlords for a monthly fee of 3,333 Afghanis. The entire population is from Pashtun communities. All residents are returnees from Pakistan.

This camp was established by just one wave of returnees in 2013. All 32 of these households previously resided in Peshawar, Pakistan. After its establishment, no new residents have joined 100 Families Camp 2, despite it being a large space which could be expanded.

The location does not provide residents with access to health or education facilities. However, residents reportedly do not plan to leave the settlement as they feel they have no alternative housing options.
