Displacement

This informal settlement is one of two separated sites in the neighbourhood of Company Bridge. Households have been built on a large plot of land owned by the Government of Afghanistan and residents currently do not pay rent. The population is largely comprised of Pashtun communities, although 10% are from Tajik communities. The vast majority of the settlement is populated by IDPs from Uruzgan, Kunduz and Nangarhar, although returnees from Pakistan own a small proportion of the households.

The settlement was first established in 2001 by 129 IDP households from Tirinkot, Uruzgan. In 2012, a large influx of 350 IDP households joined the settlement, originating from Char Darah, Kunduz. Three years later, 375 IDP households entered the site, again from Tirinkot. The last reported influx joined the settlement in 2016, with 70 IDP households moving from Kot, Nangarhar and 20 households returning from Peshawar, and Multan and Lahore in Punjab, Pakistan. Since this final influx, spatial constraints prevent further residents from joining the settlement.

Residents reportedly plan to remain in the settlement as they feel they have no alternative accommodation.
